Aleasha Taweel is a results-driven defense litigation attorney with 10 years of experience representing insurance companies, businesses, and individuals in complex civil litigation matters. She focuses her practice on general liability, premises liability, transportation negligence, and product liability. Aleasha has been recognized for her work in defense litigation and transportation law, including in the Best Lawyers: Ones to Watch in America directory and on the Michigan Super Lawyers Rising Stars list. Her practical litigation strategy reflects a results-oriented approach that aligns with her clients' needs.

General Liability

Aleasha manages complex, high-exposure cases from inception through trial, combining detailed risk analysis with practical case strategy to develop efficient, cost-effective resolutions in hotly contested litigation. Evaluating liability early, she develops targeted discovery and motion strategies designed to narrow claims, shift risk, or position matters for more favorable resolution.

Transportation / Automobile Negligence

In the area of transportation negligence, Aleasha regularly addresses issues of liability and has significant experience litigating claims involving alleged fraud in both the procurement of coverage and the claims process.

Representative Matters

Obtained dismissal through summary disposition for insurers in premises liability, negligence, and auto negligence cases by challenging causation, notice, and statutory threshold requirements, eliminating exposure in numerous personal injury lawsuits.

Successfully briefed and argued dispositive motions regarding defense and indemnification, defeating high-exposure claims exceeding one million dollars and limiting the carriers' indemnity exposure.

Negotiated favorable settlements and case dismissals in complex general liability and transportation matters while coordinating with special investigative units to undermine unsupported or inflated claims.
