San Francisco, CA – 415.625.9339

Ali Roseboro represents large corporations in all aspects of civil litigation. Her practice focuses on the defense of claims related to toxic tort matters. Ali effectively handles all stages of litigation, including conducting and defending depositions, composing extensive discovery, filing motions, and detailed trial preparation.

During law school, Ali participated in a range of internships that provided her with hands-on experience across multiple practice areas. From working with nonprofit organizations on tax-related matters to assisting in criminal defense and intellectual property cases, Ali worked directly with individuals and corporate entities, gaining a strong foundation in client advocacy, legal research, and case strategy. Additionally, Ali served as the Vice President of the Black Law Student Association, where she contributed to initiatives promoting diversity, equity, and inclusion on campus and in the legal profession. She also organized community events that celebrated diversity and fostered inclusivity, providing helpful resources for student members.
