David Oliu represents corporate and commercial clients in all aspects of civil litigation. His practice focuses on the defense of claims related to automobile and trucking liability, including personal injury and property damage arising from motor-vehicle accidents. David also assists with pre-suit investigations and supports the evaluation of liability exposure and the development of defense strategies for clients in the transportation and logistics industries.

Trucking and Automobile Liability Defense

In the automobile and trucking liability area, David defends corporate clients in claims arising from motor-vehicle accidents involving commercial fleets, delivery vehicles, and independent contractors. He manages matters through all stages of litigation, including pre-suit investigation, discovery, and liability evaluation, working closely with clients to develop efficient, results-oriented defense strategies.
