Ellie Tulumba is a civil litigator who focuses her practice on complex tort and general casualty matters, with a concentration in entertainment and sports-related risks as well as construction and premises liability litigation. Ellie has represented a host of self-insured and multinational companies, including national sports franchises, entertainment conglomerates, sports arenas, investment banks, hospitality and residential property owners, national construction companies and major hotel chains. Ellie has defended these entities in every aspect of complex litigation through trial, taking care to avoid media attention focused on her clients.

Ellie's professionalism and writing skills contribute in no small measure to the success of her efforts. Ellie also works closely with clients to advise on risk management and mitigation strategies to avoid litigation and defend claims that arise.
