Graham Pulvere litigates insurance coverage and bad faith actions in addition to a variety of professional liability matters. His practice includes first-party and third-party insurance coverage for clients in the United States and the London Insurance Market. Graham handles first-party matters including claims involving catastrophes, suspected burning, fraud, theft losses, and commercial property and business interruption losses. He also handles first- and third-party bad faith matters including excess policy claims.

Graham has represented professional clients in a range of areas, including legal malpractice actions and bar disciplinary proceedings against attorneys, and errors and omissions actions against insurance agents and brokers. He represents clients in litigation, arbitration and mediation in a number of states.

Before joining Wilson Elser, Graham was a shareholder at a major insurance defense and litigation law firm in the Insurance Coverage and Professional Liability groups, where he handled matters in the U.S. and London insurance markets.

London Insurance Market

Graham works closely with insurers and their insureds on coverage, risk management, defense of claims and lawsuits – on both an individual and national basis – audits and program management. He leverages Wilson Elser's strong relationships with many coverholders across the United States and routinely partners with third-party administrators and adjusters for and on behalf of Underwriters.

Wilson Elser provides insurers with ready access to our network of attorneys in 41 strategic locations throughout the United States. Our London office renders real-time assistance and serves as a prominent base for our visiting attorneys to the London Market. While our firm continues to embrace changing market trends and advances in technology, we still recognize the importance and value of personal meetings and client
