Gregory Shapiro's practice has focused on medical malpractice defense since 2011, primarily as defense counsel for the physicians in a large, well-known New York hospital. Previously, his practice consisted of general liability, defending slip/trip and fall actions, auto accidents and labor law matters for national insurance carriers.

After growing up in a diverse suburb, Greg attended law school in New York City, which introduced him to urban perspectives, a combination that has served him well. Greg works diligently to clearly relate material facts and issues to the client while complying with client guidelines and developing a broad-based defense strategy.
