Indianapolis, IN – 317.660.2381

Kaleb Hobgood focuses his practice on defending hospitals, health care systems, physician groups, health care professionals, and other health care entities in medical malpractice and health care liability litigation. He works closely with health care clients and insurers to evaluate claims, develop litigation strategy, and guide cases from initial investigation through resolution.

Before dedicating his practice to the health care sector, Kaleb built a robust background handling insurance defense litigation involving product liability, premises liability, and motor vehicle claims. He has extensive experience representing insurers, businesses, and individuals in a variety of civil defense matters, including bodily injury and property damage disputes. Additionally, Kaleb has successfully handled attorney malpractice claims, giving him a comprehensive perspective on professional liability and the defense of licensed practitioners.

Drawing on his active civil defense background, Kaleb provides practical, results-oriented counsel to a diverse range of corporate and individual clients. As an Indianapolis civil litigation and medical malpractice attorney, he is dedicated to protecting his clients' business interests and professional reputations while efficiently navigating the complexities of the Indiana legal system.
