Karen Amezcua is a civil litigator specializing in complex litigation and toxic torts. She represents large corporations, effectively handling all stages of litigation, including conducting and defending depositions, managing discovery, and preparing cases for trial. She began her career focusing on general liability, premises liability, automobile liability, and personal injury matters.

In law school, Karen served as vice president of the Latino Student Bar Association. She also worked as a clerk at the Orange County District Attorney's Office, where she gained invaluable experience in legal research, writing, and oral advocacy.
