New York, NY – 212.915.5635

Marlo Mitchell counsels and defends employers and insurance carriers in workers' compensation matters. She effectively manages the claims process from the inception of a file through claim resolution, adeptly handling all aspects of case preparation, negotiation, and litigation.

Before joining Wilson Elser, Marlo worked at a national civil litigation firm, where she focused on workers' compensation defense and represented large employers, insurance carriers, and administrators in workers' compensation hearings, depositions, and trials. During law school, Marlo gained valuable insight into a broad range of practice areas through various legal internships, including interning at a prominent, multi-national firm headquartered in New York City, a top international intellectual property practice, and the Major League Baseball Players Association.
