

Matthew C. Halldorson

Of Counsel

matthew.halldorson@wilsonelser.com

New York, NY – 212.915.5410

Matthew Halldorson is an experienced litigator who primarily defends physicians, hospitals, and other health care providers against complex medical malpractice claims. He has experience in all stages of litigation, including jury trials, drafting and arguing motions, conducting discovery, performing legal research, and evaluating claims.

Before joining Wilson Elser, Matt was an associate and later a principal at a medical malpractice defense firm in Seattle, where he represented clients in medical malpractice cases, licensing and disciplinary actions, and general liability claims.

After law school, Matt clerked for the Honorable Deborah A. Robinson of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. He began his litigation practice defending the city of New York in toxic and mass tort actions.

Education

- The George Washington University Law School (J.D., with honors, 2016)
 - Managing Editor, The George Washington International Law Review
- Whitworth University (B.A., magna cum laude, 2007)

Bar Admissions

- New York
- District of Columbia
- Washington
- Oregon

Services

- Medical Malpractice & Health Care
- Toxic Tort

Court Admissions

- U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York
- U.S. District Court, Eastern District of New York
- U.S. District Court, District of Columbia
- U.S. District Court, Western District of Washington
- U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Washington

Clerkships

The Honorable Deborah A. Robinson, U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia

Representative Matters

Obtained a unanimous defense verdict for a pathologist and pathology group in a medical malpractice action alleging negligent handling of a surgical specimen and failure to diagnose uterine cancer.

Obtained a unanimous defense verdict for a dentist in in a medical malpractice case alleging negligent displacement of a third molar during an extraction procedure and lack of informed consent.