Nicolas A. Wyatt is an attorney based in New York City representing commercial entities, real estate owners, and professionals in complex civil litigation. His practice includes matters arising under New York State Labor Law, health care-related disputes, and insurance coverage issues, with a focus on developing effective litigation strategies that protect business interests and manage risk.

Nicolas regularly appears in state court and has experience conducting and defending depositions, managing discovery, and positioning cases for early resolution or trial when necessary. He brings a practical, strategic approach informed by active litigation experience.

With a background in health care, including a degree in public health, Nicolas offers a multidisciplinary perspective on matters involving medical, regulatory, and technical issues. He also has direct experience in real estate operations, allowing him to approach disputes with an understanding of ownership, compliance, and financial realities.
