Madison, NJ – 973.735.6026

Suna Lee focuses her practice on the defense of general liability and product liability litigation, including benzene matters and other toxic torts, consumer fraud claims and class actions. Suna handles a variety of commercial litigation matters involving breach of contract and breach of warranty claims. In addition, she defends professional and premises liability matters; workers' compensation claims; and environmental actions under the Spill Act. Her goal in all matters is to reach a cost-effective resolution for the client. Suna has achieved certification in the firm's rigorous National Mock Trial Program, through which our most successful trial lawyers impart their knowledge to those destined to join their ranks.

For more than 15 years, Suna has represented national and international product manufacturers and distributors in federal and state trial and appellate courts. She served as national coordinating counsel for a leading global energy company in connection with benzene litigation, coordinating discovery, developing and implementing defense and resolution strategies, and directly litigating cases filed in New Jersey. Suna was able to resolve half of the docket through voluntary dismissals and has settled many of the remaining claims well below estimated values.

Prior to law school, Suna worked in the insurance industry.

General Liability

Suna has extensive experience defending corporate premises owners and operators in a wide variety of general liability matters involving commercial offices, industrial workplaces, restaurants, recreational facilities and apartment complexes. Matters have included multimillion-dollar wrongful death actions.

Product Liability

Suna's product liability experience includes the defense of benzene, asbestos, medical
